Waldo A. Thilking 1901-1927

Waldo, a grocery store manager, was killed by a man whom he had accused of attempting to steal a can of sardines. George Schultz, a night watchman at the Jaccard jewelry store, went to the Piggly-Wiggly store at 5188 Easton Avenue in St. Louis to make purchases for lunch and got into an altercation with Waldo over a 21 cent can of sardines which Thilking is said to have accused Schultz of attempting to steal. Schultz protested that he had intended paying for the sardines, but placed them back on the shelf at Thilking's command. Schultz brooded over the affair and the next morning after returning home from work he went back to the store and shot Thilking twice and then shot himself. Both were taken to City Hospital, where they died within an hour.
