Mexico south of Monterey and Chihuahua is as different from the United States as is Spain or Italy or France, yet from Chicago, for example, it is a shorter train ride to Mexico City, than to Los Angeles. And the train service all the way is excellent.

There is scarcely a mile that is not interesting—hundreds of miles that are magnificently scenic!

REDUCED FARES now make the journey possible at small expense. Tickets have long limit—May 31st, 1926; stopovers and diverse routes.

Among the NOTABLES

JOHN LOCKE

IN GREAT contrast to the undemocratic teachings of the German philosophers, are the gentler and far more liberal ideas of the great English thinkers.

There is Locke, for instance, the great English philosopher, born almost a century and a half before Hegel. He was born in Somersetshire, August 29, 1632. He studied at Oxford, and developed a fondness for politics, theology, medicine and philosophy and studied all of these. Thus he fitted himself to look at subjects from a mental, an abstract, a physical and a religious point of view—certainly taking a comprehensive attitude.

A discussion among some friends, one day, concerning the human mind, led to the beginnings of his "Essay Concerning Human Understanding," which was not compiled, however, until twenty years of work had gone into it. Troubled times in politics sent Locke and other liberal thinkers to take refuge in Holland. He was well in his fifties before he returned to England, where he received all of $150 for his copyrights on the great "Essay." He wrote, later, the "Reasonableness of Christianity," and died in 1704, in "sincere communication with the whole church of Christ by whatever names Christ's followers call themselves."

The whole sum of his teachings is universal toleration, freedom of thought and action, almost opposite to the preachings of the German thinkers.

THE other day I was a guest at the home of a friend. I took delight in watching the great pains to which both host and hostess went in making me comfortable. Not because it meant so much to me, which it did, but because I saw in it the unselfish spirit of people putting forth earnest effort to please someone.

When I say that this is the spirit of our store, I mean that this is the very thing we are trying to do, day in and day out, for every one who crosses our threshold.

When one of our men suggested a Davenport Bed to a lady in this very spirit the other day, she wondered whether he was merely trying to make a sale, but she has become convinced since buying it, that her interests were uppermost in his mind.

We believe in that sort of thing. We try to practice it.

RED CROSS FINANCES SHOW WIDE SERVICES

Past Year Cost $10,321,679.80; Duty to Ex-Service Men Paramount.

Washington.—The national and international services of the American Red Cross are portrayed graphically in a statement of the Red Cross finances for the past fiscal year ended June 30, 1925. Expenditures by the Red Cross (including both the National Organization and the Chapters) during this period aggregated $10,321,679.80.

The obligation of the American Red Cross to the ex-service and service men is represented in this sum by a total expenditure of $4,225,292.61. In the interests of disabled veterans, the Red Cross expended $3,577,916.42, of which $1,677,916.42 came from the National Organization, and $1,900,000 from the more than 3,000 Chapters and local branches of the society. Red Cross services to the men of the Regular Army and Navy the past year called for $647,376.19, of which the National Organization furnished $310,376.19, and the Chapters, $337,000.

Sharing in importance with this responsibility was the Red Cross work of disaster relief during the year. In these operations there was absorbed a total of $1,922,782.90 up to June 30, this year. This represented $1,622,782.90 of National Organization funds and $300,000 from the Chapters. Relief in foreign disasters amounted to $155,579.35. This sum was appropriated altogether by the National Organization.

Insular and foreign operations of the American Red Cross during the year included relief in foreign disasters, the League of Red Cross Societies, Junior Red Cross Foreign Projects, assistance to Insular Chapters and similar functions. Besides its disaster relief, the National Organization financed these other branches of foreign work also, including $110,235.72 for assistance to insular chapters, $177,450 for the League of Red Cross Societies, $54,984.17 for Junior projects abroad, and $80,057.62 for other insular and foreign operations.

In addition to its paramount duty to assist veterans and other service men and their families, and its disaster relief, the Red Cross expended at home through its national and chapter funds, a total of $1,029,616.05 for its Public Health Nursing Service; $154,135.09 for nutrition instruction; $314,422.76 for First Aid and Life Saving; $145,707.24 for Junior Red Cross; $132,759.58 for instruction in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick; and carried on similarly important home duties. Included in the latter were such valuable services as the Enrolled Nurses' Reserve, for which the National Organization expended $45,562.54; while other national operations at home amounted to $302,957.64. The chapters, in addition to the large part they played in all Red Cross activity, spent $675,000 of their own funds on general chapter services.

The broad humanity of the American Red Cross can never be measured by the money it costs, but even in bare terms of dollars and cents, the scope of its work is indicated. A study of these facts also shows the necessity for the largest possible enrollment, since Red Cross service is maintained almost entirely by its membership. The annual invitation to participate in this work through membership in the American Red Cross, is extended from Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving, November 26.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

THE PINK THINGUMMY

"OH, DEAR, Aesop!" complained Mrs. Dumpkopf. "I ordered a blue thingummy and they went and sent me up a pink one, and thingummies aren't supposed to be exchangeable and I suppose I'll have a terrible time getting a blue one for it."

"You won't if you go about it as a man would—as I would, for instance," said Mr. Dumkopf vigorously. "I would simply walk up to the proper official, briefly explain, and demand a blue thingummy in exchange."

"Oh, Aesop, will you exchange it for me?" crowed Mrs. Dumkopf admiringly, and the next day Mr. Dumkopf found himself briefly stating the case to the proper official and demanding a blue one.

"H'm," said the proper official, with a glance that made Dumkopf feel like a pickpocket contemplating arrest—"thingummies not exchangeable. H'm. When was it bought? Who bought it? Is this the one that was bought? Why not pink?"

"Why—er—I did. I mean, she did. I don't know. Because."

"Why wasn't it brought back before? Have you a middle name? What was the sales person's number? Were you born in this country?"

"Er—who, me? No. Yes. What?" floundered Dumkopf.

"Why blue? Did you ever exchange a thingummy before? If so, what color? Was this spot on it? Was that? Were those? How much education have you had? Why not more?"

"Flydoodl!" gasped Dumkopf, and, tying the pink thingummy in an inextricable knot around the official's neck, he bought a blue thingummy at the thingummy department.

A LINE O' CHEER

By John Kendrick Bangs

A SUGGESTION

IF YOU would fill the passing day with cheer
Spread far and wide the good news that you hear.
Upon your neighbor's virtues smiling dwell,
And if some bit of gossip you must tell
Let it be of some kindness he has done,
Or of some honor high that he has won;
And ere the day shall pass into the night
You'll find the flying minutes all delight,
And when the sunset glows out in the west
And you shall come into the vales of rest,
Faith, Hope and Cheer will be your comrades on
The highways leading to the golden dawn.

The Parable of the Plum Tree and the Indolent Individual

THE retail merchant who has a stock of merchandise on hand and fails to tell the people about his wares from day to day and from week to week through the medium of the local newspaper, may be likened unto the individual who sits down under a plum tree, ladened with ripe fruit, places the basket in his lap and waits for the fruit to fall into it.

That fellow will go home at nightfall with an empty basket.

Why doesn't he get upon his feet, give the tree a vigorous shake, rain the plums upon the ground, pick them up and fill his basket? In adopting this energetic method, he would "get results."

We feel that in issuing this newspaper regularly, which circulates in the homes hereabouts, that we are offering to the retail merchants a veritable "plum tree" bearing constantly an abundance of fruit, which only needs to be "shaken down" with a consistent and persistent line of advertising. The results will be noted in the cash register as time goes on.

In this day of sharp competition, we get only what we go after. We know that anybody in this town who has merchandise or service for sale can sell more and sell it easier if he will familiarize the trading public through our columns with what his intentions are.

Please bear in mind that if you are in business here that we are anxious to have you for an advertising patron. There can be no question concerning the results if the advertising is good advertising.

We purchase every month a cut and advertising service, fresh, expert and up to date, which we offer to advertisers. If you will familiarize yourself with this service, all of your advertising will be GOOD advertising. Select the cuts you wish to use for any particular advertisement. Our proof sheets make selection easy. You even are shown how the cuts look surrounded by advertising copy. This advertising copy offers expert suggestions for preparing one or many advertisements. It will pay you to call up or come in and find out exactly what we are talking about.
