Dyed in Wool—Guaranteed Fast—Pioneers Produced Own Color in Homespun

(Continued from page 1) Quarter of a pound of madder roots were added for each pound of material to be dyed. The material was added and boiled until the desired shade of red was obtained. The cloth was then dipped in lye-water to "set" the color and then washed in soapy water, for if even a small amount of lye was left in the material it would rot. The result was cherry bright red which would neither fade nor run! But blue! That was something else again. Boiled cedar tops gave a blue-purple, and wilding flowers a lavender, but the woods just didn't hold the secret of the true blue. For green, not a popular color, the article was usually dyed yellow and then dipped in the blue pot.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh It's the Follow-Through That Counts. Only time anybody ever heard Sam Abernathy howl out a customer was when a fellow said he was going to buy some stuff—soon as he cashed a War Bond. 'Old Sam really hit the ceiling that time! 'If our boys are to go on winning' this War, we home folks must buy Bonds and buy 'em! Don't come 'round here to spend money you got, cashin' a Bond! From where I sit, it's the follow-through that counts in life.

Homecoming of a Junior Soldier

Will it be a happy one? Certainly not as happy as the family circle were complete. For no one of us can put a father's warmth and love into that little family. But together we can give them something else—something important. We can see that they get the expert care and attention they need. We can show them that they won't be forgotten while they're above. You can share in this work by giving us—generously. Part of whatever you give helps to support agencies which look after the families of our men in service. They provide meals and hospitals to help with home problems. They offer a friendly hand in any crisis. This is but one of the many great humanitarian services that your dollars will support. It needs your help—and deserves it.

THOMAS E. DEWEY Says:

"The means by which our present unity in war can be preserved in the peace to come is the vital problem of our time. It seems to me that much of our success in war has come from the sense that every individual has a personal job to do. While there has been a mass of resignation, some necessary, some excusable, our strength at home has come wherever the genius of our men in industry and the devotion of our workers and our farmers to their jobs. Our success or failure after the war will depend on whether we take to heart the lessons the war has taught us. If we permit the continuance of the regimentation which some so earnestly desire, we shall fail."
